Washington.

His mind was given and powerful, without being of the very first order; his penetration atreng, though not so acute as that of Newton, Becom or Locke; and as far as he awn, so judgment was ever sounder. It was slow in operation, being little aided by lawration or imagination, but sure in conclusion. Hence the common researk of his officers, of the advantage he derived from councils of war, where, hearing all augustions, he selected whatever was bust; and certainly no general ever planned his buttles more judiciously. But if denaged during the course of the action, if any member of his plan was dislocated by sudden circumstances, he was MAJ. GEN. JOHN W. GEARY HOR. HENRY W. WILLIAMS was dislocated by sudden circumstances, he was clow in readjustment. The consequence way, that he of new inited in the field, and rarry's against an earmy in station, as a Boaton and York. Be was incapable of fear, meeting personal dangers with the calment unconcern. Fernaps the atrongest feature in his character was pradence, acting until every circumstance, every atrongest feature in his character was pradence, never acting until every circumsiance, every consideration, was maturely weighted; refraining it he saw a doubt, but when once decided, going through with his purpose, whatever obsteal a opposed. His integrity was most pure, his justice the most inflexible I ever have known; no motives of interest of consanguintly of iriendablip or harted, being able to bias his decision. He was, indeed, in very sense of the word, a wise, a good and a great man. His temper was naturally kritisble and hightoned; but reflection and resolution had obtained firm and habitual ascendancy over it. If ever, however, it broke its bounds, he was most tremendous in his wrath. In his expenses he was honorable, but erect; liberal in contributing to whatever promised unity, but frowming and was noborasie, one effect; merra in contributing to whaterer promised unity, but frowning and anyielding on all vision ry pro) cis, and all un worthy calls on his charity. His beart was not warm is its aff-cuous; but he exactly calculated very man's value, and gave bim a solid esteem proportioned to t.
